WOVEN PUPA

I HAVE ALWAYS WANTED TO LEARN THIS METHOD OF TYING SO I GOT BUSY AND DID THE RESEARCH. SO WITH SINGLE DIGIT TEMPERATURES AND BEING RETIRED, I SET OUT TO LEARN THE METHOD. IT REALLY WAS NOT ALL THAT HARD TO DO WITH A FEW TRICKS I CREATED. LET YOUR IMAGINATION RUN WILD. I THINK THE FLIES WILL BE VERY DURABLE. SO IF YOUR SPOUSE HAS QUIT KNITTING, THEN YOU'RE READY TO TIE. SEE Y'ALL ON THE RIVER.

"Catchin' Corner" - Troutng Tips

The following article is reprinted with permission from the Fly Shack Newsletter <http://www.flyshack.com/>

Time for Bigger Nymphs (The Real Ones Are Full-Grown)

Winter is often thought of as a time to fish very small nymphs. But winter is winding down. And while your local stream that's open to year-round fishing may look quiet, the fact is it has more nymphs in it right now than at any other time of the year - and they're getting big.

It makes sense when you think about it. Take the case of the Hendrickson, or Ephemerella subvaria, a hatch of major importance near Fly Shack headquarters in upstate New York. Last spring the pinkish-tan duns were everywhere during their emergence in May, but after the hatch was over, there were virtually no Hendrickson nymphs left in the streams - just the eggs dropped by mayfly "spinners" after their mating flights.

Within weeks, however, tiny Hendrickson nymphs had broken free of their eggs and begun their year of underwater life. Over the course of the coming months they would molt numerous times as they outgrew their exoskeletons. By late winter, they've grown about as large as they're going to get; in just a few weeks, it will be time to hatch.

Likewise, the other mayflies of spring are approaching full size at this time of year. In the east, that means the nymphs of Quill Gordons, March Browns, Green and Brown Drakes and Gray Foxes are maxing out. The nymphs of the summer mayflies, such as the sulphurs and Isonychia, are also well along in the nymphal stage of their lives.

That's not to say any of these nymphs will be very active in February or March. After all, most streams are still quite cold. But they are present, and there's little doubt that trout come across them on a regular basis, and eat them when they do.

So it's a perfectly reasonable strategy to fish nymphs in sizes 16 to 12 or even larger. Gold-Ribbed Hare's Ears, Pheasant Tails, Copper J's, Prince nymphs and the other standard patterns all do a good job of suggesting a mayfly nymph on the verge of adulthood.

Caddis pupae, too, have been growing all winter. On many streams, caddis are more important as a source of trout food than mayflies, and a Green Rock Worm or another meaty caddis nymph is a great fly to fish under any circumstances, including the chill of late winter. Bright green, tan and brown-gray are the most common colors. Czech-style, curved-hook nymphs in sizes 10 or even 8 are not too big.

The largest flies that actually do emerge in February and March are stoneflies - not the big, Size 2 salmonflies cause feeding frenzies on the great rivers of the American west in the summer, but the so-called "snowflies" or slim, dark colored species in sizes 18 to 14. Any dark-colored general stonefly pattern will imitate these flies, as will Pheasant Tails or dark Hare's Ears.

Of course, late-winter rivers are also full of small mayfly nymphs that will soon hatch into small mayfly duns. Pheasant Tails in Size 18 and smaller are the go-to pattern for the nymphs of Blue-Winged Olives and Blue Quills. And the midges that have owned the river since December are still present in large numbers. So there are good reasons for staying with small patterns, and in fact many anglers believe a tiny nymph will out-fish a large one, especially on well-educated wild fish, at any time of year.

But if you like using your bigger patterns, you're biologically justified in doing so.

One more point about fishing in late winter: trout begin feeding more actively in February. It's not because of water temperature, since the streams are pretty much as cold as they've been for the past two months, but rather increased daylight that seems to restore the trout's appetite. One biologist who runs a hatchery reports having to feed his trout a lot more once the days start getting longer.

So go ahead and drop your larger nymphs into likely holes and glides. The real bugs are almost finished growing. Before you know it, they'll be sprouting wings and you'll be fishing to rising trout, and these wintry days of nymphing will fade quickly into memory.

Rabunite 101 - An Introduction to Fly Fishing for Trout

On Saturday, April 3rd, the Rabun Chapter of Trout Unlimited will offer a 4-hour Introduction seminar for adults (male and female - age 16 years and older). The seminar includes casting, entomology, knots and equipment for folks who want to get started in the pleasure of fly-fishing for trout. The location will be at the Rabun County Recreation Center just south of Rabun County High School. We will be able to accommodate 24 students and the cost of $30 per person will include lunch.

OUR BILL KELLY – THE YOUNG CREELER (1968)

DILLARD, Georgia — Rainbow trout are a delicacy and a treat — no matter where you catch them. But here in the cold waters of the North Georgia mountains they abundantly thrive.

At Betty's Creek Recreation Area, Andy Cope has a trout farm and people come from all over the country to catch fish, stay to cook over campfires and eat them in the club house and enjoy the genuine hospitality of Earl Dillard.

THE FOLKS who live around here are great boosters of the place, too. Mrs. Kelly of Rabun Gap says that her husband Bill goes fishing every chance he has and always comes home with fish. She admits she would like to fish, but is pretty busy with four children — a daughter and three sons between the ages of 8 and 1 years old.

The Kellys never tire of fried fish—their favorite way of cooking. Mrs. Kelly says even the youngest child keeps her busy boning fish. She fries fish by seasoning the cleaned fish with salt and pepper, rolls them in corn meal and fries to golden brown all over in hot fat at least ½ inch deep in pan. She serves them with hush puppies.

http://www.sherpaguides.com/georgia/mountains/blue\_ridge/eastern/tray\_mountain.html

Anna Ruby Falls, high on the slopes of Tray Mountain, is formed at the junction of Curtis and York creeks. water becomes Smith Creek and tumbles downhill to Unicoi Lake.

Both creeks originate atop Tray Mountain and are fed by underground springs, rain, and snow. Curtis Creek then drops 153 feet, and York Creek drops 50 feet, forming the double falls. At the base of the falls, where there is an observation deck, the

The U.S. Forest Service purchased the land surrounding the falls in 1925. The 1,600-acre scenic area adjacent to and surrounding part of Unicoi State Park was established in 1964. The falls were named for Anna Ruby Nichols, the only daughter of Colonel John H. Nichols, who purchased the surrounding land in 1869. His Victorian-style mansion, West End, still stands at the junction of GA 17 and 75. He also built Crescent Hill Baptist Church and the gazebo atop the Nacoochee Indian Mound, both of which are still standing along GA 17.

An easy to moderately difficult, paved, .4-mile trail leads from the parking lot to the foot of the falls.

Directions: Take GA 75 north from Helen 1 mile; turn right onto GA 356 and go 1.5 miles; turn left at the entrance to the falls; follow this road 3.6 miles to the parking area, which accommodates 140 cars and 2 tour buses.

Rabunite Ramble

Ahhhh March, the true start of a new trout season. Spring one day, winter the next, then spring again as the struggle continues back and forth all month. Some of our deepest snows come in March. So do our first flower blossoms, and so do our first caddis fly hatches as the NE GA trout stream temperatures bounces up and down between 40 and 50 degrees.

When the water temperature is in the low 40s and dropping, dredging with one of the nymph patterns or a streamer fly in the deep, dark water and in the seams should produce hook-ups.

When the water temperature is in the upper 40s and rising, nymphs and caddis pupa begin to emerge. Many members of the same species rise to the surface at once. The trout sense the 'hatch' as an opportunity to eat plenty of food and their predatory instincts kick-in. The trout reveal their presence by 'bulging' the water just beneath the surface. This is when the angler uses wet flies or emerger patterns fished just below the surface. The fly might be used as a trailer tied 2 or 3 feet behind a dry fly.

The trout will break the water when feeding on surface flies. Some times it will poke its mouth up and just sip in the fly, often times it will swirl creating rings on the water as it grabs the fly, and occasionally the fly will disappear in what can best be described as a commode flush! Now this is the time to fish with dry flies matching the size, shape, and color of the natural flies that are hatching. Allow the imitation to float in a dead drift to the spot where you saw the trout rise. WAaahWHOooo!

This will be happening on the Tallulah, the West Fork, and the Chattooga Rivers, which are all open year around. For me, I will be on the Chattooga DH in the afternoons casting to feeding trout. In March those big brown trout in the Chattooga DH will finally start hitting dry flies.

A Chattooga DH 20 inch brown trout that took a size 16 deer hair caddis on March 15, 2005.

Guys – I hope that the Rendezvous went well for the Rabunites. Folks that went relate that they had a very good time.

Sorry that I was not able to get there. As it turns out, it was good that I stayed home to help Karen and look after the kids. She was pretty puny from a bad case of bronchitis all weekend but is feeling better now.

Dick Albertelli emailed me that he was high bidder for the Trout print benefiting Back-the-Brookie. Did you get any pictures of the bidding or of Dick? I will post it on Facebook and note it in my Back-the-brookie update. Charlie Trettel said the print went for $600. Is that correct?

Thank you very much for Rabun Trout Unlimited's recent contribution of $600 to Back-the-Brookie raised in the special live auction at the 2010 Rendezvous of a custom framed Number 1 print on canvas of "TROUT" donated by Broderick Crawford, the artist. This donation allows us to continue protecting, restoring and enhancing brook trout populations across North Georgia.

Rabun Trout Unlimited's and Broderick Crawford's generosity and support of Back-the-Brookie is greatly appreciated.

The Chapter's continuous leadership supporting coldwater conservation throughout Georgia and the Southeast is admired. Well done! Regards,

To: Rabun Chapter of Trout Unlimited

Thank you for the generous donation from the Rabun Chapter of Trout Unlimited to the Georgia Wildlife Federation in support of the Camo Coalition. I have logged the funds in and we will spend the money keeping the Camo Coalition running strong.

Like all other NGOs (nongovernmental organization), we are having some very tight times with our budget. I have now reduced our staff by nine positions and cut our program services in many ways. I was also forced after the nine position cuts to end our contract with David Waller. I regret that greatly but the cash flow was not adequate to continue at the rate we were going. GWF has been a pay-as-you-go organization and our board and I insist that we continue that policy having no debt. That is why a check from Rabun TU means so much.

I should also tell you that the Camo Coalition is up and running strong. It is not stopped or delayed in the work we do for the sportsmen of our great state. Look for Alerts and Information Notices as the General Assembly moves along. Thanks to all your members. You are a great partner organization and we appreciate it. Tight Line dear friends!

As you know, last year's donation of $3000 was to be used to pay summer interns working on trout streams in NE Georgia that contain rainbow and brown trout. It was not used.

Therefore, in the fall of 2009, Rabun TU reallocated that $3,000 to be used in 2010 as follows:

$2,000 for interns working on brook trout streams.
$1,000 for interns working on rainbow & brown trout streams.

Then on 1/28/2010 Rabun TU sent you a $600 check for 2010 Back-the-Brookie projects.

Now enclosed please find a check for $1,000 for interns working on brook trout streams.

Summary of 2010 funds: For summer intern's work, Rabun TU has allocated $3,600 for brook trout work and $1,000 for rainbow and brown trout work.

To: Dear Chapter Members,

Thank you so much for your most generous donation of $2000 to Smithgall Woods Outdoor Education Programs. I can assure you that the money will be spent wisely as we continue to expand and improve both our onsite and outreach programming, not only for surrounding counties but also for outside our usual range. Both teachers and students continue to enjoy our three most popular hands-on activities, which are Stream Exploration, Archery, and Orienteering Math. Unfortunately, school field trip numbers have decreased over the past year, most likely a result of budget cuts and time restraints for teachers; however, I am hitting the road more often with outreach (Snakes, Arachnids, Birds of Prey, Animal Adaptations and Toothpick Fish) and loving every Minute of it! Our numbers for 2009/2010 are already over 10,000, and we haven't even reached spring, which is our busiest season! Needless to say, your continued support and generosity are deeply appreciated. Please extend my gratitude with a huge smile and "thank you" to all your members!

Thank you for Rabun Trout Unlimited's recent contribution of $1,000 to our intern program. This donation combined with proceeds from the trout print auction at the Rabun Rendezvous and your earlier commitment totals $3,600 of support for brook trout enhancement and restoration this year. All of Georgia's Eastern Brook Trout Joint Venture (EBTJV) Stakeholders – Georgia DNR, USFS Chattahoochee National Forest and Georgia Trout Unlimited Back-the-Brookie appreciate your generosity.

Support, like this, over the past several years has been a key factor in our success.

The combined support of Trout Unlimited Chapters, the Atlanta Fly Fishing Club, Georgia Women Flyfishers and North Georgia Trout Online will enable us to field a full intern team this summer. We plan to resume "drought proofing" brook trout streams with structures and continue two restoration projects on Walnut Fork and Tate Branch. Interns will support scheduled chapter workdays on North Fork Moccasin Creek, Bryant Creek and the Chattahoochee River headwaters. They will also help with Brook Trout Day at Trout Camp during the fieldwork on Ramey Creek.

We look forward to another year protecting, enhancing and restoring brook trout throughout North Georgia and sharing our success with you. Regards,

Subject: Thank you from Fly Fishing for Vets

Just a quick note to let you know I did not forget about the wonderful gift you and all the members of the Rabun chapter sent to Fly Fishing for Vets. Your gift could not have come at a better time. I am working on a program right now to put together 13 combat wounded veterans, both men and women, from Fort Benning's Wounded Transition Battalion to go fishing at

Callaway

The support that you have given to Fly Fishing for Vets not only monetarily from the Rabun TU chapter, but also in the form of volunteers has made the program what it is today. I am truly grateful for the opportunity that you have given me to give back to these troops in your names will always be one of my fondest memories.

As I said, this is only to let you know that I've not forgotten about you, and that you will be receiving an official "Thank You" from us shortly.

I look forward to seeing all of you on April 10, and again, Thank You,

Status Update – Chattooga North Fork Recreation Management Plan

Forest Service Voluntarily withdraws Decisions on Recreation Uses on Upper Chattooga River

(USFS Regional News Release December 21, 2009)

The decision, which emphasized year-round high-quality trout fishing while providing boating opportunities on the upper Chattooga North Fork, was withdrawn on 12/21/2009 to allow for additional analysis. As a result, the status quo is preserved on the river (meaning no boating is allowed above the Highway 28 bridge) until the forests issue three new decisions, probably in the spring. Concerning the boater's pending lawsuit, the Forest Service filed a Motion to Dismiss \(filed December 30, 2009\). The boaters issued a 31-page memorandum in opposition to dismissal on 2/5 to which the Forest Service responded on 2/16.

"There are lots of reasons you might want to fish on public land, as opposed to, say, a well known tailwater. First of all, there's privacy. Nothing beats a remote forest creek for solitude; you won't see any canoes or party floats here."

"Googling the Backcountry" by Zach Matthews, American Angler magazine, March/April, 2009

Volunteers needed for Chattooga Anglers Diary: If you are going to fish the Chattooga North Fork for 5 or more times by the end of November 2010 and want to provide information for GA & SC DNR professionals to use in future fisheries management, please volunteer to keep a diary of your fishing experiences. To request a diary, contact Doug Adams edadams1@windstream.net

A Heron's Fly Fishing Lesson A Rendezvous Story by David Cannon

<http://www.cannonoutdoors.com/index2.php>

One of the chapters that I knew was going to be in the book, Fly Fishing Georgia (BUY THE BOOK!!) HERE, from the very signing of the contract with the publisher was Lake Seminole. I had traveled there once before with my friend Matt Bailey and his family (his father is Brad Bailey, long-time editor of Georgia Outdoor News) for a spring break fishing trip when I was a freshman in high school.

All through middle- and high school, the only things I ever thought of were basketball, girls and largemouth bass – though not necessarily in that order – and Lake Seminole, upon seeing it for the first time, appeared to me as would have Cameron Indoor Stadium. Simply put, I was awestruck by its “bassy” appearance, what with the multitude of stumps and lily pads, water seeming as black as tar with damselflies zipping just above its surface and the occasional attention-grabbing swirl causing one to nearly get whip-lash trying to see what caused the commotion before it disappeared back below. I was smitten. This was paradise.

The trip wasn't all that successful in terms of fishing, though. We each caught a few fish that week, mine going no bigger than about three- or maybe four pounds. Of course, the person that could brag of “high hook” and largest catch was, as usual, Mrs. Bailey. That woman out-fishes everyone no matter how much experience they have and no matter what real knowledge of fishing she may lack. But being that she's one of the sweetest people you'll ever come across, no one ever seems to mind too much that whatever lure she's tossing seems to always be the one that's working.

Anyhow, fast forward some ten years and I've just left my first post-college job working with Mr. Bailey at Georgia Outdoor News and have now embarked on work of which I feel completely under qualified – writing a book at age 25. I knew little of what I was getting into – it typically takes a lifetime to become an expert on any one location in regards to fishing, much less three-dozen – but I did remember that Lake Seminole was shallow with an average depth of about twelve feet, and held many quality bucketmouths, making it the perfect spot for dragging a Clouser Minnow or Cowen's Coyote, or, better yet, sliding a big popper between the lily pads in hopes that a monster would work her way through the veggies to find my bug.

We got a late jump on actually getting down to Seminole to work on that particular chapter. As it lies on the Florida border, it's a pretty nice little drive to get down there and we had been focusing our efforts (“we” being my photographer Chad McClure and me) on locations close enough to each other to knock out one weekend at a time. For example, one weekend we would complete the Chattooga River, the DH and the Tallulah River. The next, we would try to complete Noontootla Creek, Jones Creek and the Toccoa DH. Nothing is close to Lake Seminole, so it unfortunately got pushed back to the point that we ended up getting down there in the sweltering south Georgia month of June.

The fishing, as we had anticipated, was slow, but it was still a mesmerizing place to be exploring. Our guide for the weekend, Mike Sloan, is now owner of Jack Wingate's Lunker Lodge – the perfect place for a fisherman as it's right on the water and has simple clean, air-conditioned cabins with cold refrigerators and cable TV – and Mike knows the lake very well. After hopping in his boat before sunrise and trying to no avail to entice some hybrids from a spring upwelling, then some largemouths from some backwater, we decided to work the banks for bream and bass.

Luckily for us, the “willow bug” hatch was going on, and it was going strong. “Willow bugs”, as locals refer to them, are actually mayflies, and Seminole gets a huge summer hatch not unlike other southern reservoirs. From a distance, the trees appear to be moving, even in the absence of even a light breeze. In reality, every square inch of trees lining the water is crawling with millions of mayflies. It's truly an amazing sight to see.

Mike and I were casting mayfly patterns with three- and four-weights tight up under the overhanging tree limbs to bream that were on the bed. While we were catching fish – our first strong action of the day – Chad was shooting photos with his 80-200mm telephoto lens of crows hopping around on the limbs eating bugs.

“Y'all aren't gonna believe what this little green heron is doing,” Chad said.

Chad told us what he was seeing and we replied that he was seeing things.

Mike fired up the trolling motor and scooted us in closer to the action. Sure enough, this green heron was hopping on some limbs that were only about six inches above the water, and what seemed like he was eating the mayflies was actually him delicately picking up a bug with his beak, leaning over and ever-so-gently placing the bug on the surface of the water. Then, he would stand as still as a statue, staring intensely at the bug he had placed on the water. Then, like a flash of lightning, a bream would rise to eat the fly and just as quickly would become the main course for the fleet heron.

I still can't believe that a bird can process that type of information and carry out that complex of a process. The bird... was fly fishing!

I'm hoping to get back to Lake Seminole this spring in an attempt to land an eight-plus-pounder on the fly rod. My hopes are increased with the knowledge that if a bird-brain can figure out how to fly fish Lake Seminole, surely we can, too!

Editor's notes: If you were at the Rendezvous, you know this was one of the great stories David shared there. As usual, by golly, you don't have to believe it - - if you don't want to.

"BACKCASTING"

Feb 6 (Sat) Annual Planning Breakfast: 18 members met to develop the annual plan. It was a delicious and bountiful Dillard House breakfast followed by a very productive work session. The items on the agenda included:

Rabun Rendezvous de-briefing - What we can do to make the next Rendezvous even better.

2010 Budgeted Expenditures – The Chapter had $24,000 available and needed to properly allocate its expenditure to support our TU mission. See budget allocation below.

2010 Calendar – Dates were set for the upcoming Chapter activities during the next 12 months.

2010 Chapter Meeting Programs – The Chapter needs 9 meeting programs each year.

The results of the 2010 Budgeted Expenditure Planning are as follows:

CHAPTER OPERATIONS - $4,900 (Includes: newsletter, design & implementation of a new website, annual planning breakfast, memorials, equipment, administrative supplies, meeting expenses, postage, accountant services)

Feb 16 (Tues) Chapter Meeting – 29 folks attended. Sheila Humphrey, Wildlife Interpretive Specialist at Smithgall Woods Conservation Center, presented the program. Her subject was one dear to every trout angler: trout stream entomology. Sheila discussed and showed examples of the life cycles of aquatic insects found in North Georgia's coldwater streams. In addition to the big 3 (mayflies, caddis flies & stoneflies) she also discussed the life cycle of 5 other flies (dragon, damsel, crane, midge & Dobson), which are also important foods for trout. An angler with this knowledge is better prepared to match wits with wild trout.

Sheila Humphrey, Wildlife Interpretive Specialist, GA DNR

The Meeting raffle had 10 buckets with 2 fly assortments, 2 books, a fishing vest, a pair of neoprene waders, and much more. The raffle raised $120 to be used toward the cost of mailing newsletters to members without E-mail and for the meeting hospitality expenses. Thanks to Terry Rivers for handling meeting raffles. A BIG "Thank You" goes to all the Rabunites who donated the items and to everyone who purchased raffle tickets.

Feb 20-21 (Sat & Sun) Fly Fishing/TU Weekend at Bass Pro Shops. About 15 Rabunites participated and 9 GA TU Chapters were represented. Bass Pro had record sales in the fly shop, they sold all of David Cannon's books, TU sold some raffle tickets, TU gave away about 1200 trout flies, kids tied a good number of custom flies and many got to cast a fly rod for the first time. It was a productive weekend. Thanks to Terry Rivers for being Rabun TU's contact person for this event.

Feb 20 (Sat Evening) GA Women Flyfishers Mardi Gras Party. 3 Rabunites attended the very successful fundraiser at Sweetwater Brewery in Atlanta.

Feb 23 (Tues) BOD Meeting – 9 participated. The agenda included: Recaps: Mentoring at Rabun County Middle School; Annual planning meeting; Fly fishing weekend at Bass Pro Shops; "Thank you" letters to donors of the 2010 Rendezvous; Dream trip raffle; Redesign website for membership recruitment; Sessions to learn to tie flies Updates: Rabunite 101 Fly Fishing seminar; Chattooga boating zoning; LWCF; Outreach to Scouts for merit badges & Stream Explorer Members; Membership retention plan; Chapter lending library news; 2010 Chattooga Fishing Diaries; Advocacy Article for Newsletter (GEAN); October Campout at Appletree (Nantahala) Upcoming: 3/6 GA TU Council Meeting; 3/13 Hoot on the Hooch; 3/16 & 4/20 Chapter meeting programs; 3/23 Annual Chattooga Coalition meeting; 3/23 BOD meeting place; 4/3 PM Oconee River TU Chapter fundraiser; 4/23-24 Rabun TU's campout Fri night with workday Sat morning for BtB New Business: Chapter comments on USFS Soil and Water Scoping Letter #1 Chattooga River RD (due by end of Feb); 2010 River Clean-up Day on 6/26; New CRTUC pre-meeting mentoring program; Call for Chapter members to "step-up and volunteer"; Josh Seehorn's research at UGA Updates: Publicity; Membership; Treasury Report

Letter From The Chapter President

Fellow Rabunites,

Gee it's cold! Well, it's supposed to be cold this time of year. Actually, we were blessed with the first real spring feeling weekend toward the end of February. Hopefully, March will bring more days that make us get "the itch".

It won't be long before all the winter's "honey do's" will be finished (or shelved), and fishing will start to get more and more attention. Sure the water will be high, but doesn't that beat what we've had the past few years?

Don't forget to save some time for our work projects and campouts, too.

Planning is already underway for the first camp out/work day in late April. If you haven't marked your calendar for our camp outs and other events, please look back at the calendar in this "Tight Lines", and make notes of the good times ahead.

See you on the river soon.

Regards, Larry
