WHAT ARE THEY BITING ON ???

By: Terry Rivers

EGG PATTERN

Hook: #12 SCUD HOOK

THREAD: COLOR TO MATCH EGG

MATERIAL: EGG YARN / McFLY FOAM

EYE/BLOOD SPOT: EGG YARN / McFLY FOAM

THIS IS A GREAT FLY TO HAVE IN YOUR BOX THIS TIME OF THE YEAR SINCE THE DELAYED HARVEST AND BACK COUNTRY HAVE BEEN STOCKED. TIE THIS BEHIND A DRY FLY OR SINK IT WITH SOME LEAD AND USE STRIKE INDICATOR. TIE THESE IN SEVERAL COLORS. WORKED FOR ME SEVERAL WEEKS BACK WITH 15 + FISH.

"SEE YA ON THE RIVER"

Some of the best winter fishing comes when you fish like the "Dredger". It's OK to drag the bottom sometimes.

Fishing Reports

...and now the Rest of the Story from Larry Walker

The guess who is Chris Whitley in the photo. He was on our BOD and led our first stream cleanup 3-4 years ago. He was a very active contributor but he moved to Montana. He hosted Glenn Ivie and I for part of our fishing trip in September. The guess where.. We fished in a river pretty close to the sign where Glen and I had our photo taken. The guess what.. Chris landed this nice Grayling.

From Peter Croes: My phone rang on Saturday November 16th . . . it was the Dredger calling to see if I wanted to assist him in his Mentoring Penance Project; of course, I said yes and agreed to meet him in White County later that afternoon. It was cloudy and overcast and most of the DH folks from ATL had already gone home having fished the creek. We started high-sticking and throwing everything at them in a methodical pre-planned paint the water. The switch went on and the first hooked, by the Dredger, was a nice brookie and then an hour later my bad shoulder began to remind me that the steroid shot had joined the dearly departed and I was on my own . . . even though it was fish on! There were numerous burndums and uncappings although not as frequent as the WAAaah WHOooo's which were in the net!

At the Dredger's suggestion I started fishing the seams using the bugger twitching technique on a 7.5' 5x leader . . . it was Rainbows for the rest of the day! I was using the same fly all the way downstream and even caught the Trolls in the culverts, downed trees, under the bridges and the work day constructed holding areas; and yes there were many unintended snags, and limb hooks which come with the territory as well as catching the occasional oak leaf grouper clusters. With the number of fish (even though they were stockers in very good condition) I was catching it was exciting, exhilarating, and humbling that someone else was helping me to re-learn techniques so long forgotten; no, it is not like riding a bicycle.

Jeff Durniak and Ray Gentry had a slow but fun day fishing in mid November. When asked for the location from the Dredger, it was the common response... IDBIS..

Proof it was cold..

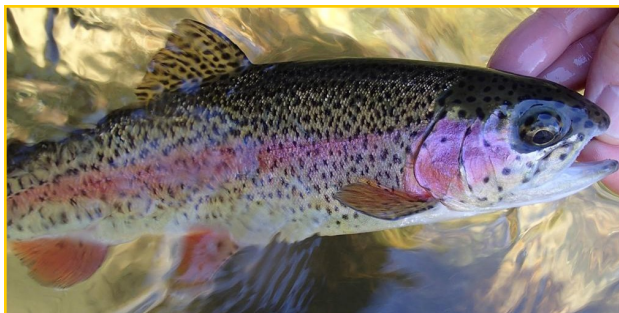

Energy foods for the day...

Despite very cold water (39F), Dredger had a great Saturday afternoon (11/30) on the Chattooga DH by bottom-rolling apricot egg flies and tungsten beaded hare's-ears along the bottom in riffles and runs. A brook, two browns, and a big bunch of rainbows came to hand. The Old Dog thanked young Landon for the recent lesson in Helen on the "French nymphing" technique, which worked well on the Chattooga. Hint: try a dab of Biostrike to save rigging time over the mono "sighter." For more info go here:

US Forest Service Southern Region Honors Georgians for work to Restore Brook Trout

Award recipients: Kevin McGrath and Alex Watson from Trout Unlimited; Jeff Durniak, Anthony Rabern, Lee Keefer, and Leon Brotherton from GA DNR; and Chattahoochee/Oconee NF staff members Jim Wentworth, Jerry Wood, Mike Brod, David Vinson, Mike Joyce, and Mitzi Cole (now on the Ouachita NF).

The Georgia Back-the-Brookie Partnership was honored by the U.S. Forest Service Southern Region as an exemplary example of Partnerships and Community Engagement in Atlanta on November 7. The award was among 15 categories of exemplary employees and projects honored for their accomplishments and dedication in supporting the spirit and mission of the agency in 13 southern states. Since 2007, the Georgia Back-the-Brookie Partnership has been working to restore native brook trout on the Chattahoochee National Forest. The Forest Service has worked closely with partners including the Georgia Council of Trout Unlimited and Georgia Department of Natural Resources, which have provided funding and other resources.

The Southern Appalachian brook trout no longer exists in much of its native range, and is only present at greatly reduced levels in Georgia. Through the partnership, biologists have a better understanding of remaining brook trout populations, and the species is more secure in the southern portion of its range than it has been in recent years. The Back-the-Brookie project has included intensive monitoring, genetic analysis, youth education, stocking of fish, and other practices to benefit native brook trout such as placing barriers to prevent non-native trout from invading the native trout habitat. To date, partners have improved 80 miles of 32 streams through the placement of large woody debris. Treated areas have increased adult trout by 37 percent and young trout by 17 percent.

"This alliance of passionate and dedicated people is making a real difference here in Georgia in the preservation of this important native species," said Chattahoochee-Oconee National Forests Supervisor Betty Mathews. "Anglers are some of our country's greatest conservationists, and we are proud to be seeing that in action here."

While a big brook trout in Georgia is about 7 inches, it remains popular for those wanting to catch a native trout. Through habitat enhancement work the partnership has increased brook trout fishing opportunities in Georgia. Contributions to the project by members of the Georgia Council of Trout Unlimited have also been recognized in Field and Stream magazine and by Trout Unlimited nationally.

Accepting the Partners and Community Engagement Award on behalf of the group at the Regional Forester's Award ceremony in Atlanta on November 7 were (L to R) Leon Brotherton, GA DNR; Jerry Wood, USFS; Betty Mathews, USFS; Kevin McGrath, Trout Unlimited; Mitzi Cole, USFS; Alex Watson, Trout Unlimited; and Mike Joyce, USFS.

Jeff Durniak (R) presents to Al Foster a Rainbow Trout print by Broderick Crawford in appreciation for his presentation.

The November regular monthly meeting was held on Nov. 21, at the TU/Scout Hut. Our guest speaker was Al Foster. Al is the Chattahoochee/ Oconee National Forest Land Acquisition Specialist. He gave us information about how the forest service goes about buying additional acreage to add to the public lands. Over 2100 acres have been acquired since 2007. Within that 2100 acres, 11 miles of streams was included in those purchases. Everyone enjoyed the information Al provided and we all walked away knowing how we can help the forest service acquire more land in the future. We also held our bucket raffle to cover the costs for those without email. Special Thanks to those who donated that helped us raise $81.00.
